FROM NEW YORK.

The Staten Island Quarantine Question—No Cholera Cases Reported—The Fire Department Excursion—Horse-Trotting—The Turf.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The tropics about the harbor are beginning to send their usual quota of sickness to the north. Two cases of cholera were reported to the city authorities this morning, on the usual time, preceding the arrival of the steamers from Aspinwall, and they were sent to the hospital on Staten Island.

Two cases of cholera were reported to the city authorities this morning, on the usual time, preceding the arrival of the steamers from Aspinwall, and they were sent to the hospital on Staten Island.

The Quarantine officers were not informed of the fact of the existence of cholera on board the steamers, but were left to discover it themselves

THE PACIFIC POLICY OF THE EMPIRE."

An Inspired Article Suggested by Napoleon.

PARIS, May 16.

The opening in the text of the Pacific article published this morning under the head of "Paris, May 16," is as follows:

"Europe is to-day blessed (blessed charged with a mission of Prince Napoleon to the Emperor Alexander, and the result of the visit of the Prince Imperial to the Emperor of Austria, and the tour of Napoleon III. has remained unknown to the public. Nothing has been said of Napoleon's visit to Italy, and the persevering efforts of the Emperor to prevent a war and her enterprises against the regions of Rome were impossible to bring about. It was not only just and moderate, but was made exclusively in the interests of European tranquility. Austria and Prussia, the two powers which have declared themselves allies or sympathizers of all the powers of Europe. She bore the weight of it more than any other, and she also gained the most portion of the glory.

Notwithstanding the allurements of such a war, in which France saw her victories only by the acclamations of Europe, the Emperor Napoleon was the first to think of pacific means to put it and to propose peace.

His situation was delicate and difficult. He could not at the same time to coordinate legitimate susceptibilities of the enemy with the dignity of the Austrian and Schleswig, but he had still considerable forces, and to appeal the freely resentment of an ally who had offered to defend him, and who had just given proof of his devotion.

Napoleon III. has remained faithful to his engagements. He has not abandoned Italy in its misfortune, and he has not allowed himself to be carried away by the passions of Europe
